BAILEY TALKS TO OHIO BARRISTERS

Discusses "Lawyer in Politics" at Cedar Point.

Sandusky, O., July 7.—The oratorical feature of the thirty-first annual meeting of the Ohio State Bar Association, in session at the Hotel Breakers, Cedar Point, took place this afternoon, when Senator Joseph W. Bailey of Texas addressed the barristers on the subject of "The Lawyer in Politics."

There are two candidates for the presidency of the association, Frederick L. Taft of Cleveland and Judge Edmund B. King of Sandusky.

The present secretary of the association, Edward B. McCarter of Columbus, recently located in London, England. He is in this country now for the sole purpose of attending the 1910 meeting. Mr. McCarter will be succeeded as secretary by J. Q. Lane of Columbus. This is conceded on every hand. C. R. Gilmore, the treasurer, will be re-elected. The final session of the meeting will be held tomorrow afternoon.

ARBITRATORS VIEW BARRICADED BARN

Take Tangible Evidence in Columbus Car Muddle.

Columbus, O., July 7.—In the hearing of the controversy between the Columbus Railway and Light company and its union employees, before the state board of arbitration, General Manager Stewart of the company admitted that he was in correspondence with a Cleveland employment bureau with a view to obtaining strikebreakers in the event that the union called a strike.

Business Agent Miller of the carmen's union cited a number of cases where union motormen had been discharged for rear-end collisions while nonunion men guilty of the same negligence were retained in the service of the company.

In the matter of the fortification of the Milo car barn, which the union men call "Fort Stewart," Miller declared that the men took it as an indication that the company was planning a lockout and made them very mad. There will be no strike for at least 10 days, that being the probable ending of the arbitration board's hearing.

The members of the arbitration board made a trip to the Milo car barns today to view the alleged fortifications.

The absence of knowledge is, having it, to apply it; not having it, to confess your ignorance.—Confucius.

PROTECTING THE ROBINS

Lovers of birds will be gratified at the fact that Mrs. Russell Sage has given $15,000 to be used in protecting the birds of the South, says The Washington Times. It is to be used in educational work in Georgia, Florida, Alabama and the Carolinas. Mrs. Sage before this last donation gave $500 to start a special fund for the protection of the robin, the object being to prevent the extermination of this member of the feathered tribe. It appears the fondness of some people in the South for robin pie is reducing the numbers of the robin to an alarming extent.

ICELAND

Iceland is perhaps the only country in the world with a strongly developed literary history which remains in the same unchanged state of nature today as it did 1000 years ago, when the characters of the great sagas roamed the rock slopes of the picturesque island, or when Lief Ericson and his hardy oarsmen sailed the seas, even to America, several centuries before Columbus was born. Prof. W. H. Schofield of Harvard University will head an expedition to Iceland this year, and hopes to find much of interest connected with the ancient myths and legends.—San Francisco Argonaut.

EXACTLY WHAT HE WANTED

London Punch does a service to mankind by printing every week several ludicrously ambiguous items called from the daily press. It is a real service, for inaccurate writing and speaking lead to — if they do not begin in — inaccurate thinking. A young Baltimore man, says the American of that city, has a habit of correcting such carelessness as comes to his notice.

The other day he walked into a shop and asked for a comb.

"Do you want a narrow man's comb?" asked the clerk.

"No," said the customer, gravely, "I want a comb for a stout man with rubber teeth."

For the Children

Prince Atom, World's Smallest Athlete.

A most remarkable little man is Prince Atom, the smallest midget in the world. The prince, who is soon to visit this country, stands just a little over two feet high and is built in excellent proportion. Although such a tiny fellow, he is the son of parents of normal size. He is well educated, speaking several languages. His title, of course, is purely fanciful, as he is not of royal blood.

For his size the prince is endowed with considerable muscular strength, and he is a skilled acrobat. Being fond of active sports, the little man has become expert in tumbling and other athletic feats. Recently he appeared before the children of the crown prince of Germany at Berlin and won their hearts no less by his wit than his physical feats.

The Revolution.

Who knows why this country is not part of the British empire? Because, you will say, the early Americans objected to the British system of taxation without representation. That is what most of the histories say, but it is not quite true. In the first place, the colonists objected to taxation with or without representation when the money was to be used for an army to keep out the Indians. The colonists were foolish enough to think that such an army was not needed. But after they had begun their war and called themselves independent the British government agreed to all the demands the colonists had made. There was no longer any danger of taxation without representation. The Americans were left without anything very important to fight for legally, but that did not stop their fighting.—Chicago News.

The Siamese Twins.

The Siamese twins were the most famous freaks that were ever shown in American museums. They were Chinese boys born at Bang Beckiong and taking their title from the country where they were brought up. Their names were Eng and Chang. The babies, born in 1825, were united by a band of flesh that stretched from the breast of one to the breast of the other. They were brought to America when they were little more than children and were exhibited in museums for many years. Their death occurred in 1872.

King and Spider.

Frederick the Great, king of Prussia, was saved from death by a spider, according to a story people tell. They say that the king was at luncheon and was about to drink some chocolate when a spider dropped from the ceiling into the cup. The king sent for another cup, and the attendant returned immediately to say that the cook had shot himself. It was afterward found that the cook had poisoned the chocolate and that when the second cup had been sent for he believed that his act had been found out.

Origin of an Old Saying.

"He's a brick" has been traced by some learned philologist to a king of Sparta who lived and reigned four centuries B. C. A visitor to Lacedaemon, the Spartan capital, being greatly surprised to find that the city had no walls, asked the king what he would do in the event of an invasion. "Sparta," replied the king, "has 50,000 soldiers, and each man is a brick."

The Chipmunk.

Chippy, chippy, chipmunk, Happy as a bee, Chippy, chippy, chipmunk, Lively as a flea—Scampering the woods, blithe and free. Chippy, chippy, chipmunk, Work to you seems play, Chippy, chippy, chipmunk, Busy all the day, Doth thee never tire? Tell me, pray.

Chippy, chippy, chipmunk, Shriilly do you call, Chippy, chippy, chipmunk, From behind the wall, And quickly run into your hall.

Chippy, chippy, chipmunk, With nest in the ground, Chippy, chippy, chipmunk, Where can it be found? For you make no betraying sound.

Chippy, chippy, chipmunk, Would that I were thee, Chippy, chippy, chipmunk, Happy, wild and free, But, alas, it can never be!

MISS ETHEL ROOSEVELT.

And Her Scotch Terrier, Bongo.

MISS ROOSEVELT ON DECK OF THE KAI SERLIN.

"She's a charming girl," enthusiastically declared a man who came over in the steamer with the Roosevelt party when asked how he liked Miss Ethel. "She's so unaffected and unspoiled," he continued, and that's saying a whole lot for such a young girl who has had enough attention to turn a head less well poised.

Miss Ethel Roosevelt, while of a bookish turn of mind, is most decidedly an "outdoor girl," and while on shipboard it was her delight to take brisk walks on deck accompanied by her latest pet, the Scotch terrier Bongo, presented to her by her host, Mr. Arthur Leigh, just before she left London. The illustration shows Miss Roosevelt standing on the deck of the Kaiserin holding the dog in her arms.

Summer Bugbears.

The girl who must economize finds that one of the chief expense items of her summer outings even in camp is the laundry bill.

One girl who objects to "horrid dark clothes that are dirty even if they don't show" hit upon a plan last summer that may prove helpful.

Early in the spring she went carefully over her wardrobe and laid aside every garment that would stand only another washing. This gave her a goodly supply of underwear, blouses, neckties, handkerchiefs and even a shirt waist dress or two.

They were all carefully laundered and put together in readiness for the vacation in the woods.

It was surprising how well dressed that girl looked, yet her laundry bill cost her not one cent. As soon as a garment was soiled it was straightway thrown away, or, rather, swelled the camp bonfire.

It is well to make a collection of garments on their "last legs" through the year, as it may not be possible in a hurry to get enough without clothes to make the plan feasible. Call it your "outing outfit" and give it a separate drawer where it can be kept in neatly folded piles, with layers of blue paper between.

A Practical Bib.

What could be more sensible than the baby's bib illustrated? It is a wonder that it was not designed years ago, but "all things come to him who waits" is a trite but true saying, and now we have this smart bib.

Every mother will appreciate the practical value of a bib that has a waistband, as this one has, and strings that tie the bib securely in place so that there is no working around to the back of the neck, thereby spoiling the front of the frock.

As seen in the cut the bib is of handkerchief linen and is hand embroidered, but the same design could be carried out in a less expensive manner.

A Better Plan.

It was the dreary hour after dinner and the girls were talking in the hushed tones appropriate to the occasion.

"I've just heard of a new charm to tell whether any one loves you and, if so, who it is," whispered Elsie.

"What is it?" queried Sophie, absently fingering her new diamond ring.

"Well, you take four or five chestnuts, name each of them after some man you know and put them on the fire grate, and the first one that pops is the one that loves you."

"H'm!" said Sophie. "I know a better way than that."

"Yes, indeed. By my plan you take one particular man, place him on the sofa in the drawing room, sit close to him with the light a little low and look into his eyes. And then if he doesn't pop you'll know it's time to change the man on the sofa."

Probate Judge Patrick A. Berry received a telegram Thursday morning announcing the news of the death of Matthew Legsdon, which occurred Wednesday afternoon at the home of his brother-in-law in Cincinnati where he was visiting. The funeral will occur in Cincinnati and the interment will take place in Spring Grove cemetery, that city.

KEPT ON PRAYING.

The House Chaplain Responded to the Journal Clerk's Appeal.

After a rather lengthy prayer by the chaplain of the house of representatives a veteran member said:

"The chaplain's prayer reminded me of the most amusing incident I ever saw during my entire service in the house of representatives. The incident occurred many years ago, so I have forgotten the names of the actors.

"One day the journal clerk rushed into the house while the chaplain was praying. He looked through the drawers of his desk in a hasty manner and then hustled to the side of the chaplain.

"'Keep on praying,' he urged earnestly. 'We can't find the journal.'

"Mr. Chaplain was so startled that he faltered in his prayer, but after a moment he seemed to grasp the situation. He bowed his head still lower and continued to pray. The usual time devoted to prayer in the house is about a minute. Members began to shift uneasily on their feet, to look at their watches, and, instead of bowing their heads in reverence, they looked at the speaker pleadingly. The speaker evidently had been informed of the difficulty, and, realizing that the business of the house could not proceed without the journal, he was willing the members should get plenty of prayer. After ten minutes' solid praying the preacher showed signs of getting nervous. He knew the members were getting restive, and he looked down to one of the clerks.

"'Don't stop,' pleaded the clerk. 'We haven't found it yet.'

"The preacher did not stop until he had been praying for fifteen minutes, at the end of which time the journal clerk rushed into the house bearing the precious book under his arm.

"'Amen,' said the chaplain, with a sigh of relief, and the speaker promptly ordered the clerk to read the journal of the preceding day's business."—Washington Times.

CARUSO'S AFFINITY CASE

Rome, July 7.—Some palacious testimony is expected to be introduced in the separation suit of Mme. Giachetti, the woman, who for years was supposed to be the wife of Signor Enrico Caruso the famous tenor, but who in reality was and still is the wife of Signor Gino Botti, when the suit comes up for trial at Florence tomorrow.

Mme. Giachetti has been separated from her husband for ten years. She was singing in the opera house at Florence when Caruso met her and the two became infatuated. They contracted a union, from which two children resulted, and which lasted for many years. Then their relations became strained and eventually they separated. Caruso making her an allowance of $1,200 a year for the support of the children. This amount apparently was not deemed sufficient by the woman, for she said to have traveled to New York early last winter, where Caruso was filling an engagement at the Metropolitan opera house, and after several stormy scenes at the hotel the famous tenor is reported to have paid her a considerable sum on condition that she return immediately to Europe, which she did.

But recently Mme. Giachetti has felt the need of more money and accordingly went to a leading society of Milan for a loan of $5,000. It is said. The society was willing to lend the sum, but demanded that the Caruso settlement of $1,200 a year be given as security. While Mme. Giachetti remains the wife of Signor Botti she cannot get the loan without his consent, and so she instituted the present action to make her separation legal. Should the husband decide to contest the suit it is expected that much of the story at present merely supposition will be brought out at the hearing.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN MEMORIAL

London, July 7.—Many American residents and visitors in London journeyed to Northamptonshire today and attended the unveiling of the Benjamin Franklin memorial erected in Ecton church. Lord Althorp presided at the exercises, which consisted chiefly of historical addresses relating to the life and services of Benjamin Franklin and his English ancestry in Northamptonshire. The whole cost of the memorial was defrayed by Americans, and the principal speech, on their behalf was made by Mr. John L. Griffiths, the American consul-general in London.

EXCHANGE OF AMENITIES

It was the morning of the Yale-Harvard game at Cambridge, and two New Haven collegians were wandering through the Harvard yard, looking at the university buildings. Down a walk toward them came a youth of serious aspect, but palpably an undergraduate. "I beg your pardon," said the Yale man, who is a bit of a wag, to the stranger, "can you tell me where I can find the Harvard University?" "I'm very sorry," said the serious one with never a smile. "They've locked it up. You see, there are so many Yale men in town."—New Haven Palladium.

NEW YORK'S LATEST TIME TABLE

Every second four visitors arrive in New York.

Every 42 seconds an immigrant arrives.

Every 52 seconds a passenger train arrives.

Every 42 minutes a new business firm starts up.

Every 48 minutes a ship leaves the harbor.

Every 51 minutes a new building is erected.

Every night $1,250,000 is spent in restaurants for dinner.—The Chronicle.

NEWSPAPER CIRCULATION ON THE OCEANS

It seems extraordinary to read of the circulation of a daily paper published on shipboard reaching 2500, but such has been the circulation of the Cunard Daily Bulletin, published on the Lusitania, though the average daily circulation is nearer 2000, says the Montreal Star. It is a 23-page journal, printed on expensive glazed paper, and costing five cents a copy. It goes to press at 1 a. m., and can be delivered to passengers if they so desire, in their berths early next morning. The editor gets his material apparently chiefly from the wireless service, and he has a place reserved for everything, from election returns to stock exchange quotations.

MINNESOTA C. E. MEETING

Mankato, Minn., July 7.—This city is entertaining for three days a large body of Christian Endeavor workers from all parts of Minnesota. It is the twentieth annual state convention and from all indications it will be the most successful as well as one of the largest meetings ever held by the organization.
